The art deco resonance in the movement and texture of Karri, shown here in ochre, offers compatibility in rooms both formal and comfortable.

Talk about a game changer. Not only did the art deco movement shake up the architecture of the early 20th century, it created a new aesthetic for designs dominated by geometric shapes. Stepped forms, broadly sweeping curves, architectural lines, craftsman details and chevrons — the looks proved anything but trendy. Now, globally sourced Hokanson carpets salute the era with the newly introduced Empire Collection for Scott Group Studio. At once modern and timeless, the all-wool rugs are deeply plush and endlessly adaptable to home interiors from contemporary to traditional and in-between. Hand-knotted in Asia, the line is available in monochromatic Laiton, Bloc, Bricka and Latta patterns, plus Karri in ochre and blush. Custom colors and sizes are available, too, for rugs both bespoke and cozy. Scott Group Studio Showroom, 1025 N. Stemmons Freeway, Suite 751, Dallas, 214-730-6220, scottgroupstudio.com.

Influenced by the craftsmanship and details of the art deco era, the Bloc carpet offers a modern take on glam.
